INTRODUCTION :- Sustainable development is an organizing principle for meeting human development goals while also sustaining the ability of natural systems to provide the natural resources and ecosystem services on which the economy and society depend. The desired result is a state of society where living conditions and resources are used to continue to meet human needs without undermining the integrity and stability of the natural system. Sustainable development was defined in the 1987 Brundtland Report as "development that meets the needs of the present generation without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own needs."

HISTORY :-

The concept of sustainable development formed the basis of the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development held in Rio de Janeiro in 1992. The Summit marked the first international attempt to draw up action plans and strategies for moving towards a more sustainable pattern of development. It was attended by over 100 Heads of State and representatives from 173 national governments. The Summit was also attended by representatives from a range of other organisations representing civil society. Sustainable development was the solution to the problems of environmental degradation discussed by the Brundtland Commission in the 1987 report Our Common Future.

The remit of the Brundtland Report was to investigate the numerous concerns that had been raised in previous decades, namely, that human activity was having severe and negative impacts on the planet and that patterns of growth and development would be unsustainable if they continued unchecked. Key words that highlighted this thinking included Rachel Carson's Silent Spring (1962), Garret Hardin's Tragedy of the Commons (1968), the Blueprint for Survival by the Ecologist magazine (1972) and the Club of Rome's Limits to Growth report (1972).

The concept of sustainable development received its first major international recognition in 1972 at the UN Conference on the Human Environment held in Stockholm.

Current Information

- Researchers have discovered a small group of brain cells in the claustrum that controls stress-induced anxiety behaviors. Manipulating the activity of these cells also altered anxiety-related.
- More than half of the Nurses had difficulty sleeping during six months of the Covid-19 pandemic - and getting less sleep increased their odds of experiencing anxiety and depression, according.
- The way a person's brain responds to stress following a traumatic event such as a car accident, may help to predict their long-term mental health outcomes according to new research.
- Biologists have found that Mother roundworms can pass stress signals

INTRODUCTION - The term Political Participation has a very wide meaning. It is not only related to participation in decision making process, Policy Political activism, Political consciousness etc. Women in India Participation in voting, Stand for Public offices and political Parties at lower levels more than men. Political Parties at lower levels activism and voting are the strongest areas of women's political Participation. To combat gender inequality in politics, the Indian government has instituted reservations for seats in local government.

Women turnout during Indian parliamentary general elections was 65.63% compared to 67.09% turnout for men. Indian ranks 20th from the bottom in terms of representation of women in Parliament. Women have held the posts of president and prime minister in India, as well as chief ministers of various states. Indian voters have elected women to numerous state legislative assemblies and national Parliament for many decades.

History

Domestic violence against women and girls (DVAWG) has a very long history, though the incidents and intensity of such violence have varied over the time and even today vary between societies. Such violence is often seen as a mechanism for the subjugation of women, whether in society in general or in an interpersonal relationship. Such violence may arise from a sense of entitlement, superiority, misogyny or similar attitudes in the perpetrator or his violent nature, especially against women.

The UN Declaration on the elimination of historically unequal power relations between men and women and violence against women is one of the crucial social mechanisms by which women are forced into a subordinate position compared with men.

Violence against women and girls is a problem of pandemic proportions. At least one out of every three women around the world has been beaten, coerced into sex, or otherwise abused in her life time with the abuser usually someone known to her.

Problems and Challenges

Domestic violence is a global issue reaching across national boundaries as well as socio-economic, cultural, racial and class distinctions. This problem is not only widely dispersed geographically, but its incidence is also extensive making it a typical and accepted behavior. Domestic violence is wide spread, deeply ingrained and has serious impacts on women's health and well-being. Its continued existence is morally indefensible. Its cost to individuals, to health systems and to society is enormous. Yet as no other major problem of public health has been so widely ignored and so little understood. There are varied consequences of domestic violence depending on the victim, the age group, the intensity of the violence and frequency of the torment they are subjected to, living under a constant fear, threat and humiliation are some of the feelings developed in the minds of the victims as a consequence of an atrocious violence. Present paper attempts to examine the impact of domestic violence against women in India.
